Survey shows folks like schools

"Canyon schools are great," "doing a good job," these are the typical responses given by residents in the Canyon Independent School District to members of the Foundations In Educational Administration who conducted a survey this past week in the local school district.

Jerry Jacobs, superintendent of schools for the Canyon district, said that much of the credit for this type of attitude goes to the teachers at the various schools.

For the past twenty years, the Department of Educational Administration as part of a continuing program to train school administrators, has conducted similar surveys each summer in Texas communities.

Questions used in the survey were devised by the school administration and the survey committee. Also included in the survey were questions formulated by the Governor's Office of Education Planning to aid in assessing public opinion about education in the state of Texas.

The poll was an effort to learn about the attitudes, feelings and desires of the people of the school district about their schools.

Prior to leaving the central office for an interview period, each team drew a random number which designated the dwelling with which that team would begin its interview. They would start at the predetermined dwelling and would continue by interviewing every eleventh dwelling thereafter. Each member of the survey team was trained in interview techniques by University of Texas personnel.

Interviews were conducted Monday through Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday the team compiled the information into booklet form and presented the information to the CISD school board, administration and interested school district residents.

Of those questioned 51 per cent have lived in the Canyon school district more than five years, 10 per cent have lived in the district from four to five years, 22 per cent have lived in the district one to three years and 16 per cent have lived in the district less than one year.

Forty-nine per cent of those interviewed have children in the local schools.

Jacobs expressed surprise but was pleased with the number of people who said they would support a bond issue to build more new schools. Jacobs feels that if something realistic is presented to the voter that it will be treated favorably. Eighty per cent of those responding to the question of a bond issue indicated they would be favorable. There were no large differences between parent and non-parent responses according to the booklet prepared by the survey team. Residents of more than five years in CISD were slightly less favorable to the idea of a bond issue but even three-fourths of this number were in favor of the proposition according to their response.

Residents of the Gene Howe district were more favorable toward the question of the bond issue than were residents of the Rex Reeves district. The survey team pointed out that an affirmative response to questions concerning future bond issues do not guarantee a favorable vote in an actual bond election. They pointed out that in recent years, more than half of the local bond elections over the nation have failed to carry.

Another area which pleased Jacobs was that people who visited the local schools felt welcome during the visit. Though only 48 per cent of the respondents visited the schools, only three per

Giant card is special to veteran

Almost six years ago while the war effort was raging in Vietnam a number of Canyon's young men and fathers were involved in military efforts across the seas.

Among them was Ronnie Stevens, who returned from the war torn areas of Southeast Asia to resume his life in Canyon as an employee of the Dobbs Corporation. He was with a Korean attachment for 14 months and during that period received a special "Christmas card" on parchment paper which had been personally signed by hundreds of Canyon residents.

Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stevens, recalls that his father (George Stevens with the Postal Service here) had written to him to find out "if he had gotten the Christmas card yet."

The young serviceman at that time thought it was just a regular "Christmas card" only to find out in mid-March of 1969 what card his father was referring to in the letter.

"It came addressed properly," recalls Stevens, "but for some reason I got it in March."

The "card" that Stevens refers to was an original poem by Mrs. Randy Buttrill with assistance from her husband's sister, Mrs. Gene Phelan. Artwork for the parchment lettered card was done by Dr. Emilio Caballero of the art department at West Texas State University. After several months of effort, the finished cards were signed by hundreds of Canyon residents and sent to the local servicemen who were then serving in the war zones of Southeast Asia.

Mrs. Buttrill had a special reason for sending the cards as her own husband, Randy, was serving in the war area.

Stevens and his wife, the former Norma Huber of Tucson, Ariz., have framed the unusual Christmas card and given it a special place in their home here in Canyon.

"I still wonder," said Stevens, "if the rest of the guys are in this area. I know several live around Canyon and Amarillo but have lost track of the guys over the years."

"I know that some weren't lucky enough to bring their cards home," he concluded.

Dowlen to recommend action by trustees on annexation

By CARROLL WILSON

Randall County Dist. Atty. George Dowlen said last week he will recommend the County Board of School Trustees proceed with consideration of a petition presented by a South Amarillo developer and make a final decision on whether the developer's property will or will not be annexed by the Amarillo School District.

Dowlen's comments followed perusal of a lawsuit filed late Friday in 47th District Court in Canyon by five residents of the development, which is now in the Canyon School District just south of Amarillo High School.

Dowlen said his recommendation might not be followed immediately by the trustees, who may prefer to await a state attorney general's ruling on exactly what procedure must be used to annex land from one school district to another.

He said he asked for the AG opinions about three weeks ago and has not yet received them.

The suit was filed Friday by attornies for James Jensen, David Coldiron, Wilbur Knighton, Jack Sebastian and Ron Fine, all residents of the development of Glenn O'Dell, who is building houses in a 50-acre tract off Hollywood Road and the Canyon Expressway.

The suit asks the district court to force the county school trustees to make a decision on the annexation requested over a year's period by O'Dell, and that the court demand the decision be for annexation. The suit also alleges that three members of the board of trustees were illegally elected to office and should be removed by the court.

O'Dell approached the Canyon, and Amarillo school boards several months ago seeking to have his 50-acre tract removed from the Canyon School District and annexed by the Amarillo district. Later, he returned with petitions from landowners within the tract. He also petitioned the county school trustees to act on the annexation issue.

Canyon board members have been hesitant to take action and have said repeatedly they will not allow part of their district to be annexed unless it is to the advantage of the Canyon district.

During one session of the county trustees, O'Dell withdrew his petition after officials told him the law on the annexation issue was unclear and an attorney general's opinion would be sought.

He later presented the petition as prepared by an attorney. Neither the county board nor the Canyon board have taken action on the petition, which asks that the land be annexed by Amarillo.

Several times, residents of the tract have appeared before the Canyon board and the county board to air grievances about being in the Canyon district.

They reiterate their gripes in the lawsuit filed Friday, pointing out their children must travel miles to attend Canyon schools when Amarillo schools are only blocks from their homes.

The lawsuit petition alleges that members of the Amarillo school board have already agreed to accept the land if annexation is approved by the county board.

"Defendants' (the county school trustees jointly and individually) action in refusing to entertain petitions for detachment and annexation is unreasonable and an abuse of Defendants' legal discretion for the reasons herein before enumerated," states the suit. "Defendants' refusal to act is not in the best interest of Plaintiffs' children or children similarly situated, but is in fact a breach of

Commission cuts $32,000 from civic center bids

City commissioners in a special called meeting Thursday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. cut $32,795 from their original plans for the civic complex. They decided to permit the contract to be drawn for $1,337,316 allowing the contractor to alter the type of brick, roofing scheme of the library and police station and deleting termite protection. This was done in preparation for the Monday night meeting of the city commissioners at the Canyon Community Center at 7 p.m.

The commissioners will consider the accepting of bids and authorizing of contracts for the new complex at the Monday meeting.

Also on the agenda for discussion Monday night is the consideration of bids for the removal of the old annex building from the site to be used for the new civic complex, consideration of the Wage and Salary Report prepared by the Public Administration Services, consideration of a rate request presented by Southwestern Public Service, consideration of a request to authorize advertising for police cars for 1974-75, consideration of the appointment of Jerry Lehnick as fire marshal for the city, review of Waste Management Committee action concerning regional waste management concepts, consideration of a request concerning the removal of the communications tower by Randall County and consideration of bids opened July 1 for water and sewer in Hunsley Hills, Unit 2.

Also on the agenda is the audit report for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

In deleting the $32,795 from the original plans, the commissioners decided to retain the pneumatic tube system and the basement. George Loudder, city manager, stated that the new building would not work without the pneumatic tube system. He also stated that the basement would be used not only as an emergency headquarters but also for the expansion of the police department. Loudder said that the police department would be the first department needing expansion as the city grows.

Loudder said that he was pleased with the decisions of the city commissioners during Thursday's called meeting. He stated that the financial program has worked out satisfactorily and the commissioners should be able to keep commitments made prior to the vote on the complex last June. He feels that the city is fortunate in these economic times to get a good realistic bid from a sound and reputable contractor.

Bids for the removal of the old annex building from the site will also be considered. Loudder is hopeful that there will be two bids submitted to the commissioners. An Amarillo firm, Nickerson Dirt and Trash, has submitted a bid. If the city commissioners reject the bids, Loudder said that city crews could be used to remove the old building.

Commissioners will consider the Wage and Salary Report as prepared by the Public Administration Services. This report was made to enable the city to upgrade the salary position of city employees for this fiscal year. It was prepared in conjunction with similar work performed for the cities of Pampa, Perryton and Tulia and also the Regional Planning Commission. The report for Canyon specifically relates to the city on an individual basis and the pay plan which is recommended is relevant to the local job market here at the time of the survey.

Bill McMorries, city engineer, will be present at the commissioners meeting to answer any questions concerning the rate request presented by South-

SO radio tower still to barn site

At week's end it appeared that the sheriff's department radio antenna would be erected near the county barn.

Plans had called for erection of the giant tower on the court house square. Workmen were already assembling the structure when a group of county businessmen complained.

An emergency session of the commissioners court decided to move the tower to the county barn area. Then there was talk that expense of the move would be excessive.

One businessman appeared before the court to complain of the expenditure. He even threatened legal action if the move were undertaken.

Monday at a regular court meeting commissioners equivocated and it seemed momentarily that the structure would go up on the square as planned originally.

Further study revealed that expensive cables connecting the tower to broadcasting equipment at the court house would not be necessary and that signals could be carried by telephone lines, thus the decision to go ahead with the move.

"I'm not absolutely certain yet where they're going to put it up," hedged an uncertain Sheriff Cliff Longest Friday.

Irishman passes through 'just to see the country'

Taking his summer holiday in the United States on a cross country tour is Pat Aherne, who received his degree in architecture this June from a university in Dublin, Ireland.

"I want to see a bit of the country here and then I'll be going back to Dublin to enter a firm of architects," said the tourist. Dublin is only a few miles from his hometown of Lemrick, Ireland.

Aherne is travelling throughout the United States picking out things to see from a 'Student Guide of North America' which is available only in Ireland and England and published as a student handbook.

He started his U.S. travels in Pennsylvania seeing the Amish folks "and their way of doing things," then on to St. Louis, Mo. to see the "gateway to the west" which spans the Mississippi River, then by way of New Orleans, La. and a few days in the French Quarter section before entering Texas.

At Houston, Aherne said he saw the facilities of the National Aeronautics Space Administration (NASA) and toured the air conditioned Astrodome and then finding it was "HOT" in Texas took a turn on the beaches at Galveston for a few days before travelling further into Texas.

His next stop was in San Antonio where he saw many sights and met a "fellow who told me about the outdoor drama here in Palo Duro Canyon and the things to see in Canyon."

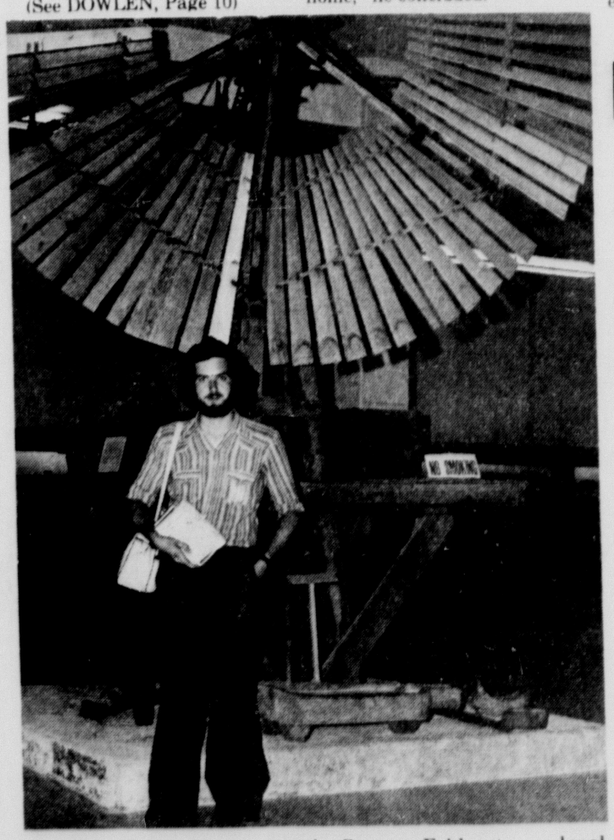
"It was good that I ran into this fellow in San Antonio," said Aherne, "as the show "TEXAS" or this fine museum here and all these nice folks weren't mentioned in the Student Guide."

"You know I have seen cows before," laughed the Irishman, "but I never dreamed of seeing them much beyond the 'cow films' so it is a real thrill to see your countryside here and the ranching, too."

Aherne was planning to see Friday's evening performance of "TEXAS" and get a taste of what it was like back in the farmer-ranchman feuding days. He seemed thrilled while strolling through the air conditioned Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon and was especially enthusiastic on seeing the Pioneer Village at the museum.

After his brief stop in Canyon, Aherne will travel "back to the hot country and El Paso then into New Mexico for touring in Santa Fe."

He said that his local tour of the Palo Duro Canyon "would help prepare his thoughts for seeing the Grand Canyon in Arizona." Then the Irishman will travel to California to see the sights in San Diego and Los Angeles, before returning across the northern states to New York



IRISHMAN Pat Aherne was in Canyon Friday to see local sights including a performance of the outdoor drama "TEXAS," the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum and Palo Duro Canyon as a result of "meeting a fellow in San Antonio."

Price ripped by farmers who back Sen. Hightower

Announcing formation of a Farmers for Hightower Committee, a group of Panhandle farmers here Thursday charged Congressman Bob Price on eight counts of disservice to area agriculture.

The committee's executive board is composed of Bob Lindsey of Canyon, Beryl Long, Silverton; Dick O'Daniel, Tulia; Rudy Tate, Samnorwood; and Vernon Harmon of Canyon who heads an advisory group.

Long read a statement at a press conference called in Canyon.

He said his group will attempt to raise funds and get out the vote for Jack Hightower, state senator running for the 13th Congressional District seat now held by Price.

Hightower is a Democrat.

Long listed his group's grievances against the Republican incumbent Bob Price. He declared that Price consistently has supported the administration and that the administration has been hostile to agriculture.

Long said Price has been silent on administration undertakings detrimental to the farmer.

1. On December 27, 1972, USDA cut feed grain payments to producers 30% and costing area grain sorghum producers millions.

2. On December 27, 1972, the administration eliminated the conservation cost-sharing program used by ranchers and farmers to fight wind erosion and conserve water.

3. On December 27, 1972, the Nixon Administration impounded disaster loan funds needed by agriculture producers at the tail end of an 18 month drouth.

4. On December 28, 1972, White House officials announced the cancellation of the loan program to rural electric cooperatives for expansion and upgrading of services.

5. On January 12, 1973, Commodity Credit Corporation interest rates were increased 58% on commodity loans.

6. During the summer of 1973, Nixon announced a price freeze on meat prices.

7. During a critical agriculture committee vote last summer on wheat and feed grain target prices, Price cast the tie-breaking vote to lower the wheat price floor 23¢ and the feed grain price floor 15¢.

8. Nixon lifted trade barriers to beef imports months ago knocking the bottom out from under live cattle prices.

"On the otherhand," said Long, "Jack Hightower has combined our interest in government fiscal responsibility with a con-

Our World

Hypocrites

By ANN BROWN

The excuses most frequently given by people who profess to believe in God but disdain His church are: "There are too many hypocrites in the church," or "The churches don't agree, so I don't know which one to choose."

Many times the person who gives those time-worn excuses for disobeying the Biblical admonition to "Give unto the Lord the glory due his name: bring an offering, and come unto his courts" (Psa. 96:8), is being hypocritical himself because he has not given his real reasons.

In the first place such critics are presuming they could manage the Creator's affairs better than He. God could certainly remove the hypocrites from His church if He chose. You don't always know who they are; He does.

The critic is also being self righteous. He is saying he is better than the Christians who go to church; they may not be too good to associate with hypocrites, but he is.

One assumes that hypocrites do go other places than church. Yet who ever heard of avoiding anything except religious gatherings because of the presence of hypocrites?

And as long as God saves souls in any church, who is to say it should not exist?

People who profess to be Christians but ignore the church frequently do so merely because there are other ways they had rather spend their time: sleeping, visiting, fishing, reading, or watching television, etc.

Often it is a matter of habit. Few people have time for anything that is not in their schedules. Whatever becomes a habit requires little effort to perform.

People not accustomed to attending church may simply feel uncomfortable — like a cowboy in flat-heeled shoes.

Why then do people not tell the truth instead of blaming it all on the hypocrites or lack of unity among churches?

There are probably several reasons, but the most common one is that they do not know the truth. The hardest person to be honest with, and the easiest one to deceive is yourself.

We have to live with ourselves, and it is much easier to do if we can blame others for all our problems and failures. That way we don't have to do anything about them because we are powerless to change others.

We can, however, with the help of God, change ourselves. But we can't unprove until we first recognize we need improvement, and want to make it.

As long as anyone allows the hypocrites to keep him out of church he will never go, because the hypocrites will always be there. Jesus explained that in one of His sermons.

In Matt. 13:24-30 He compared the hypocrites to the weeds that are always found in the fields. The farmer only sows good seeds; where do the weeds come from? (What if the farmers were to refuse to plant any more seeds until the weeds quit coming up in their fields?)

When the servants asked permission to remove the weeds, the farmer refused. He said, "Let both grow together until the harvest." Digging out the weeds, he explained, would be sure to uproot some wheat, too.

The Master promised the weeds would eventually be separated from the wheat but in His way and in His time.

There are still several groups zealously promoting the one-church theory: a world church to be supported by a world government. They insist the gospel can't be successfully preached until all faiths are united.

That doctrine has been popular since John first preached it in Capernaum. But Jesus rebuked him (Mark 9:38-41).

Others persisted, however, and did succeed in establishing a universal church supported by the government. It lasted for more than a 1000 years. It was the period known as the Dark Ages.

To presume to know a better way to conduct God's affairs than He knows Himself is the epitome of self righteousness. And the Lord condemned self righteousness more than he did hypocrisy or disunity.

Evangelist Larry Walker's advice to the people seeking a perfect church is that if they ever find it, "don't join it," because then it would no longer be perfect.

"Impeachable Offense"

By CARROLL WILSON

In the final analysis, then-Congressman Gerald Ford may yet be proven to have been right when in 1970, pressing for the impeachment of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, he said an "impeachable offense" is what the House, with the concurrence of the Senate "considers it to be."

Ford, now Vice President, said conviction, likewise, would be a matter of practicality. Conviction would result "from whatever offense or offenses two-thirds of the (Senate) considers to be sufficiently serious to require removal of the accused from office."

In the realm of practical politics, of course, Ford's definitions are accurate, but they presume the lack of appropriate precedent to guide the Senate and House in their quest for the information necessary to decide exactly which offenses should or should not be considered. Ford assumed the practical, that by definition, when the House votes impeachment or the Senate votes conviction they have themselves defined what constitutes an impeachable offense just by the action of voting.

Even though Ford was anxious to rid the nation's highest court of Douglas four years ago and has probably given his definition of "impeachable offense" some second thought in recent months, his original statement stands as one of three alternatives — probably the more likely to be taken — before Members of Congress and Senators in the days ahead as the House Judiciary Committee completes its investigation into a handful of charges levelled against President Nixon.

Sooner or later members of both bodies must grapple with definitions for the terms "impeachable offense" and the standard used in the Constitution, "high crimes and misdemeanors."

The Document

The four clauses in the Constitution which refer to impeachment are replete with terms, procedures and phrases which are to say the least controversial, yet the subjects of little formal scholarly research to this date.

The key section of the country's basic document and the one around which most of the controversy flows is Section 4 of Article III: "The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors."

What, then, it has been asked, are high crimes and misdemeanors? Do they include only crimes in violation of statutory or Constitutional law — offenses which would be considered indictable — or do they include such things as malfeasance, malpractice, breach of trust, or other activities not included under the country's criminal statutes?

The term "Treason" is defined in the Constitution itself as consisting "only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." The definition of the term "Bribery" was well known to the framers of the Constitution and is the definition known today in criminal law, according to various sources.

The terms "high crimes and misdemeanors," however, are not defined in the Constitution, although it is generally conceded the framers knew what they were speaking of when they included the phrase in the document.

While Ford contended in 1970 that an impeachable offense is that which the House and Senate decide it is, attornies for President Nixon contend basically that impeachment is criminal in nature only. Other authorities take the opposite view and say that impeachment is historically a political process and not necessarily rooted in criminal precedents.

Disagreement

The President's attornies and those who take the opposite view, notably Raoul Berger of Harvard, each have proof to back their claims.

Charles A. Wright, a University of Texas law professor and acknowledged scholar on the U.S. Constitution, is in the employ of President Nixon and earlier this year prepared a sizeable document designed to prove the "high crimes and misdemeanors" referred to in the Constitution are criminal in nature and must be indictable offenses. Their desire is apparently to prove that because of the criminal nature of the impeachment proceedings, the President is entitled to the various protections afforded accuseds in our criminal justice system.

Berger, who apparently prepared his 1973 book on impeachment primarily to discuss the issue of impeachment of judges, views the phrase with somewhat more detachment since he is not on the staff of either the President or any of the Watergate-related investigative arms. He dissects the issue to its English roots and determines that impeachment began as a process to rid the country of persons in government for political reasons or for malpractice in office.

Both researchers delve into English Common Law for impeachment precedents, but each uses the evidence thus gleaned to form a mold for their individual contentions.

Wright

Wright acknowledges that the framers of the Constitution based their inclusion of impeachment in the document in the context of English precedents.

"In understanding the context and what it implies two things should be remembered," Wright writes. "First, the Framers rejected the English system of government that existed in 1776; namely, absolute parliamentary supremacy. Instead, they opted for limited government with a finely devised system of separated powers in different branches.

"Second, throughout the history of English impeachment practice . . . there were two distinct types of impeachments in England. One type represented a well-established criminal process for reaching great offenses committed against the government by men of high station — who today would occupy a high government office. The other type of impeachments used this well-established criminal process in the 17th and 18th century for the political purpose of achieving the absolute political supremacy of Parliament over the executive."

Wright contends "it is clear from the context of the constitutional commitment to due process that the Framers rejected the political impeachments."

He says there is no evidence in either English or American history to attribute anything but a criminal meaning to the phrase "other high crimes and misdemeanors."

Following his discussion of the English precedents, Wright turns to the Constitutional Convention of 1787 and the records of the debates during that convention compiled by James Madison and published following his death. In reviewing the debates at the convention, Wright concludes that early discussions of impeachment in the convention were invalid as precedents because at the time of the earlier discussions, the framers did not have a definite idea on the actual configuration of the executive branch of government.

Wright refers only to a late convention discussion on impeachment, a discussion during which the framers agree on the inclusion of the "high crimes and misdemeanors" phrase, and states that in accepting that terminology, the debators rejected other concepts such as "maladministration." And, he concludes the debate "clearly indicate(s) a purely criminal meaning for 'other high crimes and misdemeanors.'"

Further, Wright says that the words "Treason, Bribery or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors," mean what they connote — criminal offenses.

"The use of a pre-determined criminal standard for the impeachment of a President is also supported by history, logic, legal precedent and a sound and sensible public policy which demands stability in our form of government," Wright says.

The Constitutional scholar and Nixon attorney also examines the precedents involved in the impeachment and subsequent trial of President Andrew Johnson in 1868, noting the bitter political struggle between the President and Congress which provided the backdrop for the action.

Johnson's acquittal by the Senate "indicates that the Senate has refused to adopt a broad view of 'other high crimes and misdemeanors' as a basis for impeaching a President. . . The most salient lesson to be learned from the widely criticized Johnson trial is that impeachment of a President should be resorted to only for cases of the gravest kind — the commission of a crime named in the Constitution or a criminal offense against the laws of the United States."

Berger

Berger, in his book, which includes one chapter devoted particularly to the issue of the definition of "high crimes and misdemeanors," takes an altogether different view of impeachment and the precedents for the action and would probably criticize Wright for assuming that the "gravest kind" of offense is an offense which is committed against the Constitution or the laws of the land.

Berger, who is primarily building a case for judicial immunity from impeachment, notes that impeachment and the concurrent issue of "high crimes and misdemeanors" are rooted in English Common Law and makes some observations parallel to those of Wright.

He relies to a great extent on the conversations during the debates in the Constitutional Convention and during the debates in the various states asked to ratify the document following its submission. During both proceedings, he says, there were repeated assurances that impeachment was meant only for great offenses or great misdemeanors.

James Iredell, later to become a Supreme Court justice, told the North Carolina convention that "occasion for its exercise will arise from acts of great injury to the community," Berger says. Others made it clear they were concerned with serious misconduct, using terms such as "negligence or perfidy," "corruption," and others.

Contrary to the view of Wright, Berger concludes that the complexion of the 17th and 18th century impeachment proceedings did not change when adapted to American soil. Rather, he says, the record of impeachment proceedings against various members of the American judiciary bear out the contention that impeachment is a political measure. He warns against this tendency and stresses that impeachments must fall within the purview of "high crimes and misdemeanors."

In conclusion, Berger says:

"The framers . . . completely separated the impeachment-removal proceedings from a subsequent indictment and criminal trial. Thereby they indicated that impeachment was not to be a criminal proceeding . . . History, in short, does not require indictability as the basis for impeachment."

While both Wright and Berger present compelling evidence to back up their views, neither makes a point strong enough to command total allegiance. Neither can be said to be totally right or totally wrong.

A Dilemma

If the dilemma of the person who has read both works and has also researched the issue himself persists in determining which route is correct, it can easily be imagined the dilemma which faces two houses of Congress which must make a stand one way or the other.

If Ford is right, the country may or may not be rid of a President. But, it will certainly not be rid of a gnawing problem of definition.

For the problem facing the House and Senate is one of definition of another phrase on the one hand, and public sentiment.

If, for example, the House buys Berger's contentions, how then will they explain to themselves and to the American public how they have defined the terms "unindictable crimes?" The purchase of the argument that impeachment does not require a foundation built upon indictable offenses of necessity demands a definition of offenses which are not indictable but which are nevertheless of such magnitude to warrant impeachment.

The House and the Senate will also have to ask themselves if the American public will also buy their bases for impeachment for other than indictable offenses.

It is a good bet they won't.

History Film To Be Shown At Museum

Today's "living history" program scheduled at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum is the showing of an historical film on the state of Texas.

"Texas, Our Texas" will be shown at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. today on the lower floor of the Museum Annex at the West Texas State University.

The 35-minute movie is free to the public.

July 21 the museum plans a showing of one chapter from "The Perils of Pauline." The silent film, starring Pearl White, runs 45 minutes.

The "living history" programs are presented every Sunday afternoon through August 25. Events planned for the rest of the summer include a Coffee House Package featuring three silent films. The movies star the Little Rascals, Ben Turpin and Laurel and Hardy with Jean Harlow.

One Sunday afternoon, the museum plans to pop popcorn in an antique popcorn wagon.

Grad Students Spend Summer In N.M. Study

Two West Texas State graduate students are pursuing requirements for their masters degrees the hard way this summer — in the arid open range of northeastern New Mexico.

Both Robert Smith of Amarillo and Jerry Gilbert of 1807 8th, Canyon, are working under grants from the New Mexico Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources. The work of both concerns important minerals.

Smith's scientific investigation concerns sandstone formations in the Cimmaron Valley. At one time, these clumps of material called Clastic plugs, were found to contain significant amounts of copper. At one time the plugs were actually mined for the ore. The expense of the operation proved to override the profit from the ore, but it's possible Smith's research may lead to a resurgence of interest in the sandstone plugs.

He is concentrating his efforts in an area bounded roughly by the Colorado and Texas borders, the Sangre de Christo Mountains, and Interstate 40. He is putting up with 100-plus degree temperatures, lack of fresh water and isolation to study the Dakota Sandstone.

On the other side of the Sangre de Christo, that formation has been a significant yielder of oil. Successful wells have been sunk to 8000 feet in the San Juan Valley all the way from central New Mexico to southern Colorado.

With a renewed national emphasis on getting as much oil as possible from any productive formation, Gilbert will examine the Dakota sandstone at ground level; something geologists in the San Juan can only guess at. The better understanding of the sand distribution in the formation may mean an increase in productivity for New Mexico oilmen.

Both Smith and Gilbert divide their time between field work and laboratory study on the West Texas State campus. The two will continue their graduate studies on campus this fall.

Class Set To Open For Second Session

Registration for the final summer term is scheduled tomorrow from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. in the Activities Center. Registration will be conducted according to an alphabetical time schedule.

Freshman Orientation and Academic Advising is planned from 9-11:30 in room 101 of the University Complex South.

Tuesday is the last day for payment of enrollment fees without penalty. Late registration continues until 4 p.m. Thursday, which is the last day for changes in program and payment of fees.

West Family Enjoy Canyon Life

Mr. and Mrs. Gene West and their two children, Susan and Brad, have lived in Canyon for one month. They moved to Canyon from Hampton, Va.

West completed a tour of duty with the U.S. Air Force and moved to this area to be near his relatives. West was born and reared in Pampa where he graduated from high school. His family now lives in Fritch.

Mrs. West is from Memphis, Tenn. They became acquainted while he was in the service in Vietnam. An Army buddy suggested that he write a cousin in Tennessee. Following nine months of letter exchanges, he went to Memphis where they met and shortly thereafter were married.

One of the primary reasons they chose Canyon as a place to live was the availability of apartments. Mrs. West said that she liked Texas much better than Virginia. They are both impressed by the nice, quiet small town atmosphere of Canyon.

West said that his only wish was for stores in Canyon to stay open later in the evenings. West is a salesman for Russell Buick in Amarillo.

Occupancy Rate At WT Dorms Above National Average

West Texas State University is ahead of most other colleges in the United States in filling its residence halls.

"Over the last five years, many schools have had extreme difficulties" filling dormitories, says Dr. T. Paige Carruth, Vice President for Student Affairs at WTSU.

West Texas State has dormitory space for 2400 students, about half for men and half for women. WT's "occupancy rate is probably one of the best in the nation," says Carruth.

With 12 residence halls, West Texas maintains an average occupancy of 80 per cent. The women's halls are usually 85 per cent full and the men's are filled to around 70 per cent capacity.

The 80 per cent is considered a minimum number of occupants for the long term to insure the halls finances to "pay our bills, bonds, and the cost of maintenance, salaries and renovation," adds Carruth.

During the summer months, fees collected from the dormitories are considered "over and above" the minimum operating budget of the spring and fall terms. This money is used for improvements in the halls of a more luxurious nature, "such as carpeting," says the vice president.

"We are doing extremely well" this summer, he says, "enrollment in the men's dormitories is double what it was this time last year, and the women's is up by one-third."

Dr. Carruth also mentioned the increase in conferences, short courses and camps hosted by the university, which bring visitors who may wish to stay over-night to campus.

Carruth attributes WTSU's success in the residence hall endeavor "because they are nice places to live," and because it is much less expensive to live on-campus than off."

Living in the residence hall puts the student "right in the middle of the academic enterprise." The resident student is "close to campus, the library and classes."

Besides, adds Carruth, "most students are not overjoyed about the rigors of housekeeping and cooking."

Use of the residence halls is not limited to persons affiliated with West Texas State. "We are anxious to be of service," he says, "often catering to traveling groups." One such organization is an association of senior citizens from Oklahoma City who arrived last Friday for a week end stay in Guenther Hall, and visited the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, the musical "TEXAS" and the WTSU campus.

Residence hall fees at West Texas State range from $170 to $230 per semester for double rooms. The average cost for both the long term and the summer sessions is $1.80 per day.

Retirement Party Held

A "surprise" party honoring Hazel Strickland on her retirement from her post as director of special services with the Canyon Independent School District was held Wednesday afternoon.

The reception was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Sommer, 1103 Creekmere. He is high school principal and guests at the event were fellow teachers with other members of the special services department co-hosting the affair.

Mrs. Strickland has been director of the special services for four years. She was previously with the PESO educational service center for four years and had been an elementary supervisor in Odessa. She is retiring for reasons of health.

She and her husband, Dr. J.D. Strickland, have two married daughters including Erline Dye, who is with the special services department of Irving as an educational diagnostician for early childhood problems; and Jean Watson of Los Alamos, N.M. The Watsons have provided three grandchildren for the Stricklands.

The Stricklands plan to continue residing in Canyon where he is director of the media center at West Texas State University.

WT Professor To Keynote Meeting

Dr. Emmett Smith, West Texas State University research professor and state coordinator for the Texas Teacher's Center Project will be one of the keynote speakers for the Chautauqual Centennial Education Week scheduled to start tomorrow in Chautauqua, N.Y.

Smith will be dealing primarily with the concept of teaching centers during the one week convention that will attract educators from around the United States.

Dr. Smith helped WTSU pioneer the concept of educational teacher training cooperatives in the early 50s. Prior to his arrival, practice teaching was done on the university campus in an experimental school. Smith's guidance in the formation of the nation's first teaching center led to the system where a university senior now teaches in a public school classroom for half a college semester.

Smith, along with collegues from Rhode Island and New York, will be telling the 500 educators attending the conference about the formation of teaching centers and their benefit to existing public school systems.

Dr. Smith retires August 31st after a quarter century service to West Texas State.

Candlelit Ceremony Unites Miss Hicks-Evans Saturday

Miss Amanda Jean Hicks and Alfred Dwayne Evans, both of Canyon, recited wedding vows in a candlelit ceremony Saturday, July 13, at the First Baptist Church of Canyon. Rev. Bill Foil officiated at the double ring ceremonies.

A senior at Canyon High School, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Orville Hicks of Canyon. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy W. Evans of Canyon are parents of the bridegroom. He is a graduate of Canyon High School and employed with J. D. Prosser, cement contractors.

Wedding vows were exchanged before a background of arched and spiraled candelabra with banks of emerald. The white kneeling bench was decorated with greenery.

Mrs. Meade Humphries presented the program of prenuptial music and accompanied Miss Julie Brantley who sang Follow Me and Wedding Song. Also accompanying the vocal selections on the flute was Miss Teddi Crager. The ceremony was closed with Rev. Bill Foil singing The Lord's Prayer. Tradition wedding march by Lohengrin was used for the processional and Bless This House was the recessional selection.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a formal gown of peau de soie and Chantilly lace which was an original design by Pricilla of Boston. The A-line skirt was attached to an empire waist and the formal chapel train was bordered in lace. The bodice of the gown featured lace forming a wide square neckline. It was buttoned in back with a row of tiny buttons and the long sleeves were of lace, also fastened with tiny buttons. The mantilla of imported bridal illusion was outlined in lace and secured to a close fitting coif with pearl encrusted lace leaves. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and gardenias with babies breath.

She carried out the tradition of "something old" and "something new" by carrying a handkerchief which had been given to her mother by a great-grandmother and which had been carried by Mrs. Hicks in her own wedding. The handkerchief had also been carried by both of the bride's sisters in their weddings. She wore a strand of pearls which were a gift from the bridegroom and had a six pence in her shoe, which had been used by both her sisters.

Maid of honor was Miss Christi Ann P richard of Canyon. Miss Samantha Ann Holmes, a cousin of the bride from Houston, was junior bridesmaid and Miss Ginger Burns of Amarillo served as flower girl. The bridal attendants wore pinafore style dresses of red and white gingham checks. The dresses were accented with white eyelet bibs with lace and red velvet trim and each carried a natural straw fireside basket filled with red carnations, white daisies and baby's breath.

Gary Bednorz of Canyon served as best man. Roger Evans, brother of the bridegroom, was candlelighter and David Thomason was ringbearer. Ushering were Stanley Hicks of Amarillo, brother of the bride, and Tony Gibson of Canyon, the bride's brother-in-law, along with John Aragon and Terry Slagle of Canyon.

For her daughter's wedding, the mother of the bride selected a formal length dark brown voile sleeveless dress with matching jacket. The bridegroom's mother chose a formal length blue knit dress with jacket. Both mothers wore white rose corsages for the occasion.

A reception followed in Fellowship Hall where the bride's table was covered with white flocked organdy, trimmed with red and white checked ribbon. The all-white tiered wedding cake was crowned with red carnations, white daisies and babies breath. Also on the table was a four branched silver and crystal candelabrum with white candles and matching flowers. Red punch was served from a crystal punch bowl. Those attending the bride's table were the bride's sisters, Mrs. John Walker of New York City and Mrs. Tony Gibson of Canyon, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Stan Hicks of Amarillo.

The groom's table was covered with a red and white checked cloth with the cousins of the bridegroom serving at the table. Serving the chocolate cake and coffee were Miss Dana Cheek of Tulia, Miss Cindy Prosser of Amarillo, Misses Beverly and Debbie Lowery of Amarillo and Miss Kathy Jane of Amarillo. The bridegroom's table was centered with a basket of flowers.

Also in the reception houseparty were Mrs. Bill Anderson, Mrs. Dale Killingsworth, Mrs. Genelle Bourland, Mrs. R. Aragon, Mrs. Glenn Gilmore and Mrs. Skip Cunningham.

After a wedding trip, the couple will be at home at 1509 2nd Avenue in Canyon. The bride changed to a floor length denim-look dress with jacket and matching blue denim platform sandals for travel.

Pre-nuptial courtesies extended the couple included a rehearsal dinner Friday evening which was given by the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Evans; and a noon luncheon Thursday at the home of Ada Crager for the bridal party and close friends. The bride and her bridesmaids were honored at a luncheon Saturday noon at the Yum Yum Tree Restaurant in Canyon with the bride's grandmother, Mrs. J. D. Ivey of Hale Center, as hostess.

Double Ring Nuptial Vows Read For Miss Wall-Propst

Double ring marriage vows for Miss Cappie Cheryl Wall and Rod Propst were read at the First Baptist Church Chapel in Amarillo with Dr. Winfred Moore, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Easton Wall, 6113 Dreyfuss, Amarillo. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Sue Propst of Lubbock.

Marriage vows were read at 2:30 p.m. July 13 and organist, Louis Muckleroy, accompanied the soloist, Greg Jenkins, for the musical selections. The processional was Wagner's Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral and solo presentations were One Love by Richard and Karen Carpenter and Follow Me by John Denver. The recessional music was Trumpet Minuet from Water Music by Handel.

Miss Gail Wall served as her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Terri Bell of Stratford and Miss Vicki Coates of Seminole, Oklahoma. The attendants were attired in formal gowns of mint green voile featuring empire waistlines and large flounced hemlines trimmed in white lace. The back waists were accented with a large self material bow with streamers extending to the hemline. They wore green hats trimmed in white lace, white gloves and each carried a yellow long stemmed rose.

Freddie Hardin of Amarillo served as best man. Groomsmen were Tom Sterrett of Amarillo and Curtis Jenkins of Lubbock. Ushering were Dennis Schulze and Ken Porter, both of Lubbock.

Flower girl was Miss Holly Robason and serving as the ringbearer was Van Wayne Sullivan.

Escorted and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of silk organza with a fitted empire bodice which was overlaid with Viennese lace. The neckline was Victorian featuring lace with a sheer yolk enhanced with miniature tucks extending onto the full organza sheer sleeves that were caught at the wrist with deep cuffs edged in Viennese lace. Her A-line skirt was floorlength and featured a flounced hemline and swept into a full chapel train edged with Viennese lace. The back waistline was accented with a self-material bow and her picture hat was accented with the same Viennese lace and a large illusion bow which draped into a fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of yellow rosebuds, white yellow-throated orchids and babies breath.

Wedding guests were served at a reception in the church parlor where the table was decorated with silver serving pieces, centered with a candelabra decorated with white and yellow daisies. The three tiered wedding cake featuring white roses and pale green leaves were topped with a white dove.

Serving at the table were Mrs. Phyllis Palser, aunt of the bride, from Plainview and Colleen White and Robin Willingham, both of Amarillo. At the guest book was Pattijon Talley, a cousin of the bride.

For a wedding trip to Ruidoso, New Mexico, the bride changed to a travel costume of beige jersey in a suit styling which was accessorized with bone patent and her corsage was orchid and powder blue flowers.

Canyon Band Students Attend Camp At WTSU

Twenty-four members of the Canyon Senior High School and Junior High School bands are among 1185 attending the 22nd West Texas Instrumental Music Camp at WTSU July 14-26.

Attending the 13 day music camp are students from Arizona, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

The camp is "regarded as one of the largest of its kind in the United States," says Dr. George Umberson, head of the WTSU Music Department and camp director.

"Many directors have told me that students who attend are at least one semester ahead of where they would have been in the fall without the intense effort of two weeks" at camp, says Umberson.

The camp is of value to the students both "musically and personally."

Nine bands, a symphony orchestra, and twirling and drum majoring techniques are features of the summer workshop. Dr. Ralph Laycock of Brigham Young University conducts the Honors Band and J.R. McEntyre of Odessa the Symphonic Band.

The Honors and Symphonic Bands are made up of the most advanced instrumental players in camp, selected by audition. The junior Honors, Symphonic, Concert and Varsity bands are composed of eighth and ninth grade students.

Reading bands are volunteer organizations of both high school and junior high students. These groups read and demonstrate new releases.

Campers spend from "five to six hours a day in work," says Umberson. In addition to required membership in one of the bands or orchestra, students may take instruction in choir, music theory, baton twirling, drum majoring, conducting, solo preparation, improvisation and beginning piano.

Friday July 19, the camp will present a concert beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the Branding Iron Theatre on campus. The Finale Concert is scheduled Friday July 26.

Readin' And Writin'

Been reading where morale is the main thing to a diet. Guess it is true since those who are enthused about their dieting can really make a difference when they tell others about their new diet . . . and for those cholesterol conscious it has been found through research at the University of Georgia that the "only fatty acid which raises the blood cholesterol level is not even present in meat fat." The primary acid in meat fat (caproic) actually lowers the blood cholesterol and blood pressure according to the research.

Dietwise the best thing to consider toward good health is proper eating habits and good daily nutrition, which includes breakfast (you skippers take note) which can be served easily from the package such as a bowl of cereal with milk and fruit if desired.

By the way those breakfast cereals list nutritional information on each package about their vitamin and mineral content along with percentages of carbohydrates, protein and fat. Another important fact listed is the number of calories gained by a one-ounce serving which is important to the dieters.

Read in Family Weekly recently that the way to keep yourself on a "diet watch" is keep the calories low and morale high by turning up the scales two pounds (you really know you are two pounds lighter each time you step on to weigh) and face daily temptation by keeping a chocolate bar or other fattening favorite food handily on the table (the trick is you just don't eat it and that way you can save yourself ? calories each day by simply saying no to yourself).

Another point to remember on hot summer days is the "cool drink syndrome" where we open the ice box to see canned drinks cool and ready for the taking. Keep a supply of buttermilk, diet soft drinks and tomato juices available for those "moment's notice" drinks because they are both refreshing and have a lower calorie count to burn up before bedtime.

Also read somewhere recently that folks can make themselves "conscious of their eating habits" by having a small notebook handy in the pocket to jot down what they eat, when it is eaten and why (because you are hungry, depressed, or bored). Take notes for a few days or a week and then see if there is a trend to your eating habits — may want to change a few habits now and start the downward trend.

Wood Named New Assistant Football Coach At WT

Earl Wood, a standout linebacker at West Texas State University in the mid-1960s, has been hired at WTSU as an assistant football coach. He replaces Jimmy Campbell, who was recently moved into the position of athletic business manager.

Earl and his twin brother Burl formed part of an outstanding linebacker group for the Buffaloes in 1965 and 1966.

For the past two years Wood has been the offensive coordinator at New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, N.M. NMMI was the fifth leading junior college team in the nation in passing offense in 1972. The team ranked third nationally in rushing offense and fifth nationally in total offense in 1973.

A quarterback and safety at Cabool, Mo., High School, Wood played linebacker and fullback at Coffeyville, Kan., Junior College in 1963 and 1964.

At West Texas State Wood was named by the Dallas Morning News to its All-Texas College team in 1966. He played five seasons of professional football after graduation from West Texas State in 1967.

He was with Saskatchewan of the Canadian Football League in 1967 after going through training camp with the Chicago Bears.

In 1968, 1969 and 1970 he played with Norfolk, Va., of the Continental Football League and was named to the all-league team all three years and served as defensive captain. In 1971 he was a player-coach on the Norfolk team and his coaching assignment was with the defense. Norfolk won the Continental League championship in 1968 and 1971.

Wood was an assistant football coach at Lake Taylor High School in Norfolk in 1971. He was the offensive coordinator and in charge of recruiting for NMMI for two years. His brother Burl was the head coach at the Roswell school. Burl is now on the coaching staff at the University of Texas at El Paso.

Wood is married to the former Debbie Sterrett of Roswell, N.M. They have no children.

If predictions mean anything, and usually they do not, Canyon Eagle football team will rule the roost in district 1-AAA. Top O' Texas Football magazine is predicting Canyon first followed by the Levelland Lobos according to Ron Mills, head football coach at Canyon High. Canyon is also rated sixth in the Panhandle.

Canyon Eagles will know who is playing quick side tackle only after the pads are donned during workouts prior to the season's start.

Terry Hayhurst, a six foot 220 pound junior student is a top contender for the position. Hayhurst is attempting to shape up this summer. According to Mills, if Hayhurst will shape up, he has the best chance for the job.

Mark Jackson, a six foot 190 pounder, is a definite starter somewhere according to Mills. Jackson is a senior this year and is fast for his size. He runs the 100 yard dash in a 10.8 second time.

David Whetsel, five foot nine inch, 180 pound senior, saw lots of action last year and according to Mills, Whetsel will play a lot this year.

Russell Scott, who played for the junior varsity last year, will have a lot of potential for this year's team. Scott, a six foot 190 pound senior, played defensive and offensive tackle last year. Scott hurt his knee last year during the season and had surgery during the spring. If he has recovered by the time season workouts begin, football fans should see him in on a lot of action.

Joe Gillis, a five foot 10 inch 160 pound lineman, played two games at nose guard last year. Gillis was 142 pounds when he started in this position last year.

Canyon Babe Ruth League All-Stars could not get it together as they dropped their allotted two games in the District One double elimination tournament at Follett this past week.

Here is hoping the Little League All-Stars will have better luck in their tournament that begins July 15 in Pampa. They will play Pampa in their first game at 6:30 p.m.

According to some observers, the World Football League is good football until the real thing comes along. One observer stated that it was a good game considering there were no exhibition games.

It has been amazing to watch new leagues that spring up as they devise their own colors for the balls to be used. The WFL is using gold balls with orange stripes. Wonder what color they could make a hockey puck or baseball?

Trainer Clinic Held At WTSU

A workshop for student athletic trainers was held Monday through Thursday at the Activities Center on the WTSU campus. The workshop was co-sponsored by WTSU and Cramer products.

Forty students from Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas spent 12 to 13 hours each day in various activities including lectures, demonstrations and practical work. Students received practical training in preventative and treatment methods concerning injuries.

Lynn Laird, director for the workshop, stated that students were given an overall view of the work done by an athletic trainer.

Twenty-five beginners and 15 experienced students attended the sessions.

Those assisting in the training were Laird, physical therapist with the Physical Therapy Clinic and the High Plains Learning Clinic (LLD), Porky Morgan of Kansas State, Jim Ketcham of Andrews High School and Jack Cramer, chairman of the board for Cramer. Cramer was also coordinator for the program on the WTSU campus.

Defendants' duty to see to the best educational interests of all the children of Randall County."

Attorney for the plaintiffs, Bob Templeton of Kolander, Templeton & Hamilton of Amarillo, told the News his clients intend to win their suit.

"We're tired of the tail wagging the dog," he said. "We're gonna fight this thing to the finish."

The lawsuit also claims the election during which board members Charles Purcell, Joe Turpin and Don Marsh were elected was conducted on an illegal basis. The suit alleges that the election allowed only Randall County precinct residents who lived within the Canyon School District to vote for the candidates. This violates the statutes, the suit says.

Dowlen said he has also asked the attorney general's office for an opinion on the way the elections were conducted. He said several opinions rendered during the 1950s indicated to local officials that the election was legal. But, he said he has asked whether a new Texas Education Code passed recently by legislators would pre-empt the older AG opinions.

Dowlen also said the decision on whether to allow the Amarillo district to annex the 50-acre tract would be a discretionary matter for the county board. They could decide either to allow the annexation or could reject annexation.

Board members themselves told the News last week they were holding up action on the petition by O'Dell until they received the attorney general's opinions sought through Dowlen.

And, they also gave an indication on how they now stand on the annexation issue.

Board President R. B. Gist declined to comment on whether or not he favors annexation of the tract by the Amarillo district, saying he needed more information.

On the other hand, Purcell said he is flatly against the annexation. He noted the residents of the development have not yet paid any school taxes.

"They aren't even taxpayers yet," he said. "When they get to paying some school taxes, then let them go ahead."

He said he is currently "not a bit" interested in voting for annexation. He also cited the fear of a steady erosion of tax base for the Canyon district if Amarillo begins annexing CISD land within the city limits of Amarillo.

Board member Marsh said he favors doing that which is wanted by the majority of the people in the area. He said he feels in the long run it might be to the advantage of CISD to allow the land to be annexed by Amarillo.

"To my way of thinking you can't support schools with residential property," he said. "You have to have an industrial tax base. It would really be to Canyon's advantage and Amarillo's disadvantage."

Board member Turpin said he would now be opposed to allowing Amarillo to annex the land.

"It's a small and irregular area," he said. "If we're going to decide anything, the broad question needs to be decided, not just one small part."

Turpin said he wouldn't favor taking any action on the issue until the Canyon and Amarillo school boards meet on some agreement to the issue themselves.

cent of those visiting felt unwelcome.

On the question of annexation, the survey team noted a high interest in the question of Amarillo Independent School District annexing a part of CISD by the low percentage of no opinion or no answer responses. Only eight per cent of those asked had no opinion or no answer. Of the total respondents, 63 per cent were opposed to annexation. Parents felt more strongly than non-parents in their opposition according to the survey.

Those who had lived in the local school district were more opposed to the annexation. Those in the northern part or Gene Howe area were more opposed to annexation than those in the Rex Reeves district.

Concerning the greatest needs of Canyon ISD, many of the respondents had no opinions. Of those expressing an opinion, the largest single need mentioned was for more classrooms or school buildings, particularly in the northern area of the school district. Another area of concern was that of class size. Residents of the school system feel the need for smaller classes.

The survey team indicated that the majority queried felt the need for more emphasis to be placed in 35 separate areas. Vocational or career education was named for 31 per cent of the total respondents. Over one fourth of the responses emphasized the need for more emphasis to be placed on such academic subjects as reading, math and language usage. Life sports such as golf, tennis and swimming were also mentioned.

Only one third of the respondents to the sample thought certain programs should receive less emphasis. According to the survey team, this indicates that the constituents of the school district are either satisfied with the overall program as it is now or wish to increase the offerings rather than decrease. Athletics were mentioned most often as needing less emphasis.

The samples indicated that CISD is doing a good job, according to public opinion, of preparing students for college but residents of the district feel that the preparation in job skills is not as successful.

The school dress code question was responded to by 98 per cent of those polled. According to the survey findings, there seems to be strong feelings in favor of the schools regulating dress and appearance of the students. Those under 25 were not as strongly in favor of the codes as those over 25. In the total sample 76 per cent favored the school regulating the appearance of the student and 22 per cent were against the regulation. Parents felt the need for regulating the appearance more than did the non-parent.

Fifty-three per cent of those questioned felt that the existing dress and appearance standard in the local system was satisfactory. The remainder of the responses were evenly divided between too lenient, too strict or no opinion.

The appointment of Jerry Lehnick as fire marshal for the city will also be considered. Fire marshal responsibilities have been located in the Office of Code Enforcement. Lehnick will be attending fire marshal school at Texas A&M during the latter part of July. He is presently performing the duties of fire marshal.

New Computer Being Installed At WTSU

"We're going to have one of the finest computer systems in the state, maybe the nation." That's the way West Texas State University computer systems director Durwood Henderson describes a new system now being installed on the Canyon campus.

The DecSystem-1070, the latest innovation in computers, will undergo a test of its capabilities sometime within the next two weeks. By early fall, Henderson expects the million dollar brain to be fully operational. It will replace the school's IBM 360 model computer which has served WT since the early sixties.

One of the unique features of the new computer is its time-sharing capability. Up to 60 students, researchers and administrators will be able to use the computer simultaneously. This is possible because of the 24 million word on-line data base built into the machine.

One of the most glamorous aspects of the Dec 10 is an ability to talk with the computer by telephone. Briefcase-sized mini-computer terminals called data links can be used anywhere there is a telephone. All the user has to do is place the phone in a cradle and call the computer. From there, he calls up information just as if he were in the same room as the cabinets filled with miles of colored wire and dozens of blinking lights. Of course, the computer package includes printers for the traditional "hard copy."

"This phone-in capability," says Henderson, "means that a student could sit in his dorm room at three o'clock in the morning and use the computer to help his review of statistics, biology experiments, or sociology problems."

The old computer system has been a work horse not only for WT but for several regional governmental bodies. The new compliment of equipment will make speedier processing possible for Randall County and Panhandle Regional Planning Council records, plus processing services for Region XVI of the Educational Service Center.

The around-the-clock operation will enable the system to handle class scheduling for 21,000 students on 24 high school campuses, annual processing of over 125,000 report cards, attendance reporting for 24,000 from 30 campuses, test scoring for over 10,000 standardized tests and the annual processing of over 80,000 payroll checks.

A Case Study In Practical Politics: Judges And Con-Con

By CARROLL WILSON

Randall County Judge Woody Pond gets hot under the collar when you talk about passing a law which might keep him from sitting on the bench in his courtroom.

Pond, like nearly 200 other county judges in Texas, is not an attorney and the reason he gets hot is because there's been a lot of talk in the state this spring about taking layman county judges off the bench.

But, Pond and his colleagues along with the aid of a couple of groups of attornies got together down in Austin and squelched another in a series of attempts to change the nature of the Texas judiciary system, a series which extends back to the early 1900s.

Legislators sitting as delegates to the Texas Constitutional Convention which wrapped up its sessions last week in Austin (which is still trying to finish a document in Austin) withstood the tides of change after some hard lobbying by the county judges and left in the Constitutional proposal provision for judges to retain their judicial functions.

The spring battle, which consumed a good portion of the convention's time, may be over for the county judges but if history is any precedent there'll be another attempt in the future.

The controversy stems from the current constitution's article establishing county courts. The article stipulates county judges must be "well informed in the law" but does not specify they must be attornies. In fact the current constitution, one drafted in 1876, is the only constitution in Texas history which requires Supreme Court judges, judges in courts of criminal and civil appeals and district judges to be attornies. It's interesting to note that U.S. Supreme Court justices are not required by the federal Constitution to be attornies.

Nevertheless, a move came in the early portion of this century to establish special county-level trial courts with attornies at the helm as judges. County courts at law were initially established beginning in 1907 with Dallas County. County courts at law under the current Texas Constitution assume much of the judiciary and trial function of the county court and the county judge, when a county court at law is established, becomes primarily administrative head of his county.

Other early century efforts at reform of the judiciary were aimed primarily at unification of the Texas judiciary into one court system under the Supreme Court.

The first plan to suggest all county judges must be attornies was proposed in 1943 by Dean Charles McCormick of the University of Texas Law School. His plan was to make lay county judges county managers.

The Texas Bar a decade later made a similar recommendation. But, neither plan was implemented.

During the 1960s, the issue became more relevant as the U.S. Supreme Court handed down several decisions which said, in essence, that a person accused of crime has the right to be represented by an attorney.

The move for judicial reform hit stride in the late '60s and early '70s.

In early May 1972, a Chief Justice's Task Force for Court Improvement handed over its recommendations for change. Under the task force plan, all county court at law judges would have to be attornies and county courts at law would operate as the current county courts. County judges and justices of the peace would have been administrators.

The plan was not implemented but virtually at the same time the plan was being formulated, a House Judiciary Committee study was underway on the same subject. The House committee, after conducting hearings throughout Texas (to which only one county judge attended), submitted proposals for change, again incorporating the suggestion that the lay county judge be made an administrative officer with his judicial functions transferred to a county court at law.

The Chief Justice's Task Force report and the judiciary committee's report are progenitors of the proposed article initially produced by the committee on the judiciary article this spring at the Constitutional Convention. State Rep. L. DeWitt Hale headed the House committee study group and also headed the judiciary committee drafting proposed constitutional changes this spring.

In the meantime, more power in the judicial realm had been withdrawn from lay county judges by two separate actions. A federal district judge in East Texas decided in 1972 that juveniles must appear before attorney judges when accused of crimes. The decision effectively removed from lay county judges the responsibility of handling juvenile cases.

Texas legislators in 1973 proposed a constitutional amendment later passed by the voters to give district judges concurrent jurisdiction over probate matters along with county courts.

With all the concern over lay county judges, there was some caution on their part with the opening of the constitutional convention in January, according to interviews with various participants. County Judge Pond and others travelled to Austin to testify before the judiciary article committee, but apparently their testimony had no effect.

The first draft of a new judiciary article eliminated the lay county judge from the bench.

"Changes in the social and economic structure of the state during the past 140 years have severely undermined the rationale for our present county court system," wrote the committee in passing out its proposal. ". . . The sophisticated problems of today's local government require more than part-time attention from the principal county official. Likewise, the number and complexity of judicial issues confronting a county judge have greatly escalated since the 1830s. . . ."

Submission of the article for floor debate raised a tumult from Texas lay county judges, who had been watching the convention proceedings through the relatively new Texas Association of Counties, and its executive director Buck Douglas.

Pond and a number of judges travelled to Austin again, this time to talk with delegates. Their concern centered on their feelings that they were capable of handling judicial matters and their belief that establishment of county circuit courts would mean a monetary loss to their counties since all fine and fee money would go into state coffers.

Pond contends a lay county judge can handle his judiciary and administrative duties in stride, if well prepared. He believes that the constitutional provision for establishment of county courts at law when needed is mechanism enough to promote change.

Rather than see judicial functions taken from lay county judges, Pond proposes a reform measure which would require county judges to attend annual schools in the state. Justices of the peace are already required to meet this requirement.

A second draft proposal of the constitution also contained the same provision for elimination of the lay county judge.

But, this time, lay county judges teamed with groups opposing the judiciary article due to the inclusion of a state's right of appeal and groups opposing the article because it unifies the judiciary. Together the groups sent the committee back to reconsider.

The version finally adopted retains the constitutional county court and says the legislature may provide by law for circuit courts.

History indicates reformers will try again, but their chances for success are limited. The Texas Association of Counties proved in the convention to be a strong lobbying force to keep members informed. Even without the TAC, prior reform movements have had trouble implementing suggestions.

Several sources consider the primary impetus for change in the judiciary as lying within the higher ranks of the judiciary itself. One source even predicted that when former Chief Justice Robert Calvert retires from the political field, reform will also be shunted aside.
